

The Colin Powell Program in Leadership and Public Service GRADUATE STUDENT APPLICATION FORM (2016 - 2017)

Each year, the Office of Student Success at the Colin Powell School for Civic and Global Leadership selects up to five graduate students to participate in the Colin Powell Program in Leadership and Public Service for a one-year period. Graduate students are encouraged to explore ways in which their developing academic expertise can be used to address urgent public problems in underserved communities. Fellows work with a faculty or community sponsor to develop a thoughtful project that is of public consequence. In addition, fellows attend seminars that meet regularly throughout the year, attend special events, and have opportunities to hear from distinguished public figures.

Sponsorship

Prior to applying for the fellowship, students must secure a sponsor, identify a specific project topic, and work in conjunction with their sponsor to create a realistic and thoughtful work plan for the year. Sponsors may be a faculty member at City College, a faculty member at The CUNY Graduate Center, or a professional in a leadership role at a community organization. If the project is already underway, a clear description of the roles and responsibilities to be carried out by the applicant should be included. In addition, sponsors should work in conjunction with the candidate to demonstrate that their project is in compliance with Institutional Review Board (IRB) protocol and procedures.

Sponsors must be willing to supervise the graduate fellow's work throughout the year and provide guidance and suggest relevant resources or skill building tools as necessary. Sponsors may not offer support for more than one applicant per academic year.

Project

Fellows may decide, in conjunction with their sponsor, to pursue a project of their own creation, or assist their sponsor in an ongoing, established research project. Students can choose to design and execute an independent study of a particular social phenomenon, serve in a research associate capacity for a community-based organization, or carry out predetermined responsibilities for a faculty-sponsored project already underway. All projects must address an urgent public problem impacting an underserved community.

Eligibility

- Applicants must be students in good standing who are enrolled in one of the seven social science graduate programs offered through the Colin Powell School for Civic and Global Leadership at City College. (Masters programs in Economics, International Relations, General Psychology, Mental Health Counseling, Public Service Management, Sociology, and the PhD in Psychology at City College offered through the CUNY Graduate Center)
- Applicants must have a minimum of one full academic year left in their graduate studies at the beginning of the fellowship term and must enroll in a minimum of six credits per semester during the length of the fellowship.

Selection Criteria

The fellowship selection committee will rank and select graduate fellows based on the following criteria:

- The nature of the project and the feasibility of its completion by the applicant within the term of the one-year fellowship
- Demonstrated need of the project, or the project's demonstrated need of the specific responsibilities to be carried out by the applicant
- The potential impact of the project on underserved communities
- The commitment and ability of the community and faculty sponsor to supervise the applicant's work
- The project follows IRB protocol and compliance, and actions have been taken to secure approval and/or exemption for the project.

Seminars

This year-long, monthly seminar is designed as a series of workshops and discussions to provide graduate fellows with the time and space to engage in independent, purposeful, and meaningful study of a topic that ultimately pushes them towards a long-term post-graduation goal. Over the course of the academic year, students will be asked to think deeply about the kinds of issues, questions, skills or areas of knowledge that are important to their work, and to simultaneously develop a systematic process for learning about that issue, question, skill or area of knowledge. At the end of the year, graduate fellows will be asked to produce a final paper and deliver a formal, in-depth presentation that outlines their yearlong sponsored project, what they've learned, and the ways in which the experience might contribute to a public issue impacting underserved communities. To that end, graduate fellows spend the year developing an expertise that they can ultimately share with others. Seminar times and dates will be determined by the group at the beginning of the fall semester.

Funding

Fellows receive a $15,000 scholarship for the one-year period to support their efforts and participation in the program.

Applications and Deadlines

Completed applications must include: an application form, one essay, one letter of support from a faculty or community sponsor, one letter of recommendation, a resume and a transcript. Applicant's Signature

Dear Colleague:

The abovementioned student is an applicant for the Colin Powell Program in Leadership and Public Service at the City College of New York (CCNY). The Graduate Powell Fellowship is an intensive program for CCNY graduate students from all academic majors and programs. Fellows in the program will complete a project over the course of the year that addresses a pressing issue of public concern or impacts an underserved community.

In order for a student to be accepted into the program, they must secure sponsorship for their projects. Sponsors may be a faculty member at City College, a faculty member at the CUNY Graduate Center, or a professional in a leadership role at a community organization.

As a sponsor for a Colin Powell Graduate fellow, you commit to supervising the work of the graduate student and assessing their progress over the course of the academic year. Sponsors will commit to providing guidance as necessary.

In making decisions among applicants, the selection committee carefully considers each candidate's intellectual promise, leadership potential and commitment to public service. Your candid assessment of this student is an important part of our evaluation process.

On a separate page, please comment on the candidate in light of these criteria. Submit your letter to the candidate in a signed, sealed envelope. Completed applications are due Friday, April 1, 2016 by 4:00pm.

The abovementioned student is an applicant for the Colin Powell Program in Leadership and Public Service at the City College of New York (CCNY). The Powell Fellowship is an intensive program for CCNY undergraduate and graduate students from all academic majors and programs. Through the fellowship, students are encouraged to explore the ways in which their academic interests are relevant to public efforts that aim to address society's most urgent challenges. Students accepted into the program acquire a broad knowledge of political institutions and the policy-making process and learn about public service careers and opportunities. Fellows also explore leadership development and alternative models and methods for creating political and social change.

In making decisions among applicants, the selection committee carefully considers each candidate's intellectual promise, leadership potential and commitment to public service. Your candid assessment of this student is an important part of our evaluation process.
