

ADMISSIONS FACT SHEET 2020/2021

The Sophie Davis Biomedical Education Program at the CUNY School of Medicine is one of the most unique medical education programs in the United States. The program brings together talented and motivated high school graduates of diverse ethnic, cultural and economic backgrounds to prepare them to serve medically underserved communities as primary care physicians. It is a seamless program with a specially designed curriculum that prepares students to receive both the B.S. and M.D. degrees from The City College of New York (CCNY) in seven years.

Unique Features

- Receipt of B.S. and M.D. degrees in 7 years
- Bachelor of Science/Doctor of Medicine degrees from The City College of New York
- U.S. News and World Report ranking as one of the best public universities
- No MCAT required
- Specialized integrated undergraduate and clinical curriculum
- Early clinical exposure
- Excellent academic and personal support services

Description

The Sophie Davis Program/CUNY School of Medicine provides an integrated curriculum leading to the B.S./M.D. degrees in seven years. The undergraduate curriculum includes the biological, physical and biomedical sciences, epidemiology and bioethics, as well as the humanities and social sciences. Students begin their exposure to patient care with a three year continuity experience in a health center. During medical school, clinical rotations take place primarily at our affiliate hospitals which include St. Barnabas Hospital, Staten Island University Hospital, Harlem Hospital, Jacobi/North Central Bronx and Forest Hills Hospitals. Our focus on population health and its role in wellness and disease prevention equips students for a successful transition into residency and for primary care practice.

Admissions Criteria

Our Admissions Committee considers applicants based on a holistic review using a personalized, balanced assessment which includes metrics, experiences and attributes. These include:

- ~ Outstanding achievement in high school (minimum average of 85 for the first three years) with a strong record in the sciences and eleventh grade mathematics
- ~ Performance on the ACT (American College Test) and the SAT (Scholastic Assessment Test) - however, due to COVID-19, the university has implemented a temporary suspension of standardized admissions testing requirements, and therefore the ACT and SAT will not be considered for Fall 2021 admission
- ~ Volunteer and work experience, especially in health-related areas such as hospitals and/or community settings
- ~ Evidence of leadership, initiative, responsibility and motivation to pursue a career in medicine
