Dear Students,

I would like to introduce to you the 2022 Spring Schedule. We have an extensive variety of courses across all our academic concentrations for the Interdisciplinary Liberal Arts major as well as the Early Childhood Education degree program. Our Academic Advisors will continue working with you by appointment to help you decide on classes that are best for you, not only for your academic goals, but also those that will keep you on track for graduation. Staff members are making an extraordinary effort to meet your expectations in this unusual time.

Please note that there is a mix of online, hybrid and in-person courses offered. Online and hybrid courses will remain the same as they are conducted now in collaboration with your instructor. The in-person classes will be conducted in physical classrooms at the Center. There are also opportunities for a hyflex modality with some students physically in class and others attending remotely.

All the support services we currently provide will continue---therapist, tutors, student affairs, financial aid, admissions, enrollment, advising and IT; and are available remotely through our website and our Virtual Front Desk. Some tutoring services will be in-person. Please check the website later for the specific tutoring schedule. Our administration, faculty, and staff continue to work to provide our students the best service and support. As I wrote to you in the early days of the pandemic, now 18 months later as we move to expand our in-person presence, our mission is stronger than ever and we will continue to stay strong together.

All the best to you and your families. Be well, and stay safe.

Course Descriptions

ANTH 26504, 4CWE [49440]

Language and Society

Wednesday 6:00 – 9:20PM

Calagione

Mode: Hyflex Asynchronous Online or In-person and partial online

How does language shape our view of the world and how do we use language in everyday life to create our social worlds? What orients our choice of the codes and contexts we deploy in speaking? These are some of the questions that we will be exploring together in the field of linguistic anthropology. Much of this course will examine the relationship between language and cultures, social identities, and power. In all of our readings and in the written assignments we will continue to push ourselves to think about the relationships of power and the social imaginaries that are a part of everyday language use. We will look at language practices and constructions of class, race, gender, ethnicity, and nation. We will cover topics such as language and worldview, social stereotyping and discrimination, bi- and multilingualism, language socialization, literacy practices and schooling.

NOTE: THIS COURSE REQUIRES SOME WEEKLY ONLINE PARTICIPATION. STUDENTS MUST BE PREPARED TO USE ONLINE RESOURCES BEFORE THE FIRST CLASS. CLASS WILL MEET VIA HYFLEX IN PERSON OR ONLINE FROM 6:00PM – 8:00PM AND HAVE ADDITIONAL ONLINE WORK.

Pre-req: Intro level social science or Equivalent.

4 hrs.; 4 crs. (W)(U)

EDCE 20614, 1CWE [37252]

ECE II: Development, Assessment, Teaching and Learning in Inclusive Settings

Monday 5:30 - 8:50 PM

Diaz

Mode: In-person

Students construct a working understanding of theorists such as Dewey, Piaget and Vygotsky, as applied to young children and the curriculum and practices that support their growth. Students will explore typical and inclusive classroom practices in depth. These understandings are grounded in systematic observations culminating in a child study. Fieldwork required.

Pre-requisite: EDCE 20604.

Early childhood teacher candidates will explore and construct understandings about the ways in which young children process experiences in their social worlds. Course participants will be provided with experiences to facilitate children’s inquiry and interests through the components of social studies which include: individual development, social and civic competence, knowledge-based concept of social reality, appreciation and respect for human diversity and global citizenship. Special attention will be given to integrating curriculum, with emphasis placed on multicultural settings, utilizing children’s diverse ethnocultural backgrounds to enhance social studies curricula while creating a productive, tolerant and enthusiastic community of learners. Must be taken with EDUC 40200. Pre-Req.: EDUC 32304 and formal admission to the Early Childhood Education program.

History of Human Rights
Tuesday 6:00 - 9:20 PM
Woessner
Mode: In-person
We take their legitimacy for granted today, but what are human rights? When and where were they conceived—and by whom? Who ensures them and why? This course examines the development of the concept of human rights from its historical origins in the Enlightenment up to the present. In addition to exploring the idea itself, we analyze key moments in the history of the fight for human rights, including the American and French revolutions, the age of imperialism, and the establishment of the United Nations in the aftermath of the Second World War. Special attention is paid to the role that political, economic, and military violence has played in the articulation of the human rights discourse we currently employ. We read primary documents in the evolution of human rights, as well as their legal, philosophical, political, and cultural foundations. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

History of Childhood in America
Saturday  9:00 AM -12:20 PM
Cotter
Mode: Online synchronous
Children are our most precious creations; yet few people know much about their place in history. This course will offer a sweeping view of the history of childhood in the United States from the pre-colonial era to the present day. Readings, discussion, films and other materials will shed light on the experiences of all sorts of children—the rich, the middle class, the poor and the enslaved from a variety of backgrounds, including American Indian, European, African, Latin American, Caribbean and Asian. The course will also compare numerous ideologies about childhood, theories of childrearing, laws governing children’s lives, and social actions taken to protect children throughout the nation's history. Students will read a combination of books, articles and historical documents. Writing exercises will provide practice in working with chronologies, analyzing historical documents and comparing and contrasting various historical moments. Each student will also work on an individual project which will be presented orally. 4 hrs.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

Writing for Interdisciplinary Studies I
Monday  6:00 - 9:20 PM
Clark
Mode: Online synchronous
This is an interdisciplinary, humanities-based writing course. Reading includes a wide range of essays, each proposing a ground-breaking theory pertinent to a particular discipline. These essays will be matched with short fiction and shorter essays providing a social context for the theories proposed by writers such as Sigmund Freud, Karl Marx, Dr. Martin Luther King, Carl Jung, Alice Walker and Virginia Woolf. In response to these combinations, text-based student essays of at least 750 words will pair interdisciplinary theory with a social context. The course emphasizes critical reading, thinking, and writing skills as well as various rhetorical approaches to the composition of the academic essay. Art On and Off the Wall
Friday  5:30 - 8:50 PM
Benedetto
Mode: In-person
Art On and Off the Wall is a rapid-fire, immersive introduction to methods of art-making with a focus on 'design' as a metaphor for everything from where to put the line on a piece of paper to what it means to create a time, location and social context in your life to make and show art. In addition to an introduction to a variety of methods of art production (painting, sculpture, installation, with a particular emphasis on drawing as the basic tool of visual thinking), we will engage in some more free-style off-the-wall modes of thinking, including making art in and for a wide variety of spaces from a bedroom, to an exhibition, to a public space.

Our class time will be divided between teacher and student presentations, studio work, and class discussions. Every week there will be a teacher-led presentation of art-historical precedents, ranging from painting to music. We will also explore how alternative exhibition tactics illuminate the possibilities of various creative enterprises. There will be weekly assignments with occasional outside reading. There is an expectation of high energy, willingness to experiment and improvise, and class participation. By the end of the class we will have produced a variety of projects, an artist book, and a class exhibition. Supplemental Class Fee: $100. 4 hrs.; 4 crs.

The essay often gets a bad rap these days. It’s frequently associated with the five-paragraph work of formal essay writing. But the essay, in its purest form, is the exploration of an idea, no matter how many paragraphs or diversions—stylistic or rhetorical—it takes. The word essay itself comes from the old French essai, which means, “to try,” and the Latin: rudimentum, which means “trial or attempt.” So, how do we define Creative Non-Fiction? It's not quite journalism. It's not quite “formal” essay writing but essay writing in its wholesome form. Creative Non-Fiction is a branch of writing that employs the literary techniques usually associated with actual people, places, or events. Creative Non-Fiction requires imagination—it evokes an image, draws on emotion, and it creates a lasting impression on the reader. In this class, we will “try” and write about our lives as we mirror, and read from a broad category of prose works such as personal essays and memoirs, narrative essays, observational and descriptive essays. Pre-requisites: Writing for Interdisciplinary Studies I and II or equivalent. (Formerly ENGL 31134) 4 hrs.; 4 crs. (W)(U)

This course will introduce students to cultural and literary theory. We will survey a number of important schools of critical theory, including formalism, structuralism, deconstruction, psychoanalytic, new historicism, post-colonial and cultural studies. Theorists studied will include Roland Barthes, Michel Foucault, Susan Sontag, and Sigmund Freud. Their theory will be studied alongside a variety of "texts", including the poetry of William Wordsworth and Samuel Coleridge, Shakespeare’s The Tempest, Flaubert’s Madame Bovary, and Anderson’s Winesburg, Ohio, as well as Jamaica Kincaid’s Annie John, the art of Edward Hopper, the Log of Christopher Columbus, The National Defense Education Act of 1954, and Why Johnny Can’t Read. The goal is to acquire a new critical vocabulary --"critique"--and, of course, to sharpen critical reading, thinking and writing skills. Students will be required to write a number of shorter essays on the above texts and a final ten-page critical essay on that perennial bestseller, written by none other than Dr. Seuss, The Cat in the Hat. Formerly CWE 31308. 4 hrs.; 4 crs. (W)(U)

This course traces the evolution of African societies from the 1960s to the present. It begins with an analysis of the formation of postcolonial states, which is followed by studies of the varied ways in which Africans have sought to make their own history since independence, and the internal and external obstacles that have confronted them in this process. Topics to be considered include the rise of the authoritarian state, Ujamaa and Self-Reliance, structural adjustment, popular culture and African youth, HIV/AIDS pandemic, the politics of ethnicity and globalization. Among the countries from which case studies would be drawn are Congo, Nigeria, Ghana, Senegal, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Eritrea, Kenya, Zimbabwe, Mozambique and South Africa. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W) (U)

Mode: In-person
This course explores constructions of race in the U.S. with a focus on “Latinos.” Seen as perpetual outsiders, those who would be defined by this term are not easily categorized: do they comprise a cultural, religious, racial, ethnic, linguistic, national group? To get at these questions, we begin with the historical and legal construction of whiteness and its “others.” We then explore how Latinos fit into the black-white racial binary—how are they situated and how do they situate themselves within this paradigm? Finally, we turn to emergent forms of racialization, honing in on language and immigration as newly defined sources of difference. 3 hr., 3cr. (W)(U).

This course is a survey of the historical development of Latin American Cinema. This semester, we will specifically concentrate in the study of comedies that reflect on the immigrant experience. A discussion on laughter, humor, parody and irony will interlock with a deep analysis of the "structures of feeling" reflected in each film. What is funny? What is not funny? Does humor expire? Is it possible to export humor? Is there a level of truthfulness and social criticism in comedy? In this course we will discuss the real "Nacho Libre"* and will be acquainted with Cantinflas, the "Mexican Chaplin". The Dominican character of "Valbuena" will be contrasted with "Carlos Benjumea", his Colombian counterpart. All the films will be dubbed or subtitled in English. 4 hrs.; 4 crs. (W)(U)

The Civil Rights movement is rightly viewed as a turning point in American history and politics. Yet to grasp its significance, we need to examine today’s “official” memory of the movement in the light of its real evolution, social and international context, internal debates and controversies. The course will begin by examining present-day representations of the movement, the construction of American racial ideology and the contested legacy of Reconstruction, together with current issues like Katrina and Jena that highlight its relevance. We will look at key international and domestic events contributing to the movement’s evolution (Great Migration, Harlem Renaissance, WWII, Cold War, Vietnam) and the shifts in philosophies, strategies and outlook, from early debates between Booker T. Washington and W.E.B. Du Bois, the emergence of the NAACP and Urban League, to the emergence of Martin Luther King, CORE, Malcolm X, SNCC, Black Power and the Black Panthers. We will also discuss often-overlooked issues such as the role of women leaders like Ella Baker, Fannie Lou Hamer and Assata Shakur; how the movement changed when it moved North; its interaction with African independence movements; and its important cultural dimension. Students’ participation will include reading, watching a number of films, at least one class presentation, short reaction papers and a research paper. 4hrs. 4crs. (U)

Mode: Online Asynchronous
This course examines the interactions between gender and globalization. It discusses the centrality of gender in international development by focusing on gender as one of the most critical factors that affect the success or failure of the globalization process. The course reviews general theories of globalization, development, and the role of gender. It then presents a historical overview of these processes. Exploring gender dynamics within the context of international development, it examines selected topics: global restructuring and the feminization of the labor force, gender characteristics of international debt and structural adjustment, gender in multinational corporate employment, and the role of the state in gender inequality. The course also addresses the impact of culture, religion, nationalism and mechanisms that control women’s sexuality. Finally, providing a basis for research and strategies of social change from a gender perspective, it explores the diverse forms of women’s responses to development, locally and globally. 4 hrs.; 4 crs. Writing About New York
t.b.a.
Mode: In-person
This is a creative writing course, and, as such, everything we do will be in the service of engaging and enhancing our reading for the purpose of acquiring a deeper understanding of, appreciation for and the ability to write about our New York City. Each great historical age has one cosmopolitan city that defines the era. New York is that city in our time. We’re going to investigate, explore, understand and write about the wild metropolis in which we conduct our lives. We’ll use all of our faculties, our intellect, our senses, our analytic skills, our writing skills, our observational skills and our common sense to know our New York in an even richer way than we do from working, going to school and/or making our lives here. We’ll read, watch films, television, walk, and act as if we were detectives, flaneurs and anthropologists as well as foodies, storytellers and poets. We’ll consider both the macro and micro forms that are the fundamental building blocks of our city. We’ll go to museums, read each other’s poetry, sit in cafes to contemplate and write about our perceptions of the nature of our streets and lanes. Going to the theater or writing about going to a club could be the basis for an assignment.

We’ll read such writers as Luc Sante, E.B. White, Andre Aciman, Adam Gopnik and Annie Lanzilotto. Expect to be passionately involved in this course. Don’t come if you want to relax and cruise. Register for this course if you love New York and want to understand it in a deeper way through writing. 4 hr., 4 cr. (W/ U)

Bachata for A Diaspora: Dominican Fiction and Film of the 21st Century
Tuesday  6:00 - 7:40 PM
Carlson
Mode: In-person
In a poll of American literary critics organized by the BBC in 2015, The Brief Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao was voted the 21st century’s best novel so far. To be sure, it is a great literary achievement, a mark of pride for all Dominicans. But Juno Diaz’s remarkable Pulitzer Prize winning fiction is more than a singular accomplishment. It is a portal to a mansion of Dominican storytelling with rooms in English and Spanish, in prose fiction and feature films. Our course will visit those rooms to see how they show the history and experience of the Dominican Republic and its diaspora in the USA. In addition to Diaz’s masterpiece, we will consider writing by women such as Angie Cruz’s Dominican and Rita Indiana’s Tentacle. No less impressive in recent years is the growth and quality of feature filmmaking in the Dominican Republic. This includes works such as Sugar, Sand Dollars, Woodpeckers, and Cocoté, among others. We will analyze these stories for what they say about Dominican experience and – equally important as works of art – how they say it. A number of questions will frame the ways we come to understand these works. How do they portray alternative views of Dominican history, culture and society to challenge official versions? To what degree does Trujillo’s 20th century dictatorship still shape aspects of the 21st century life? In what ways do the works explore how Dominican lives are influenced by race, class, and gender? How do different generations understand these issues? What role does the diaspora play in all of this? Who controls what constitutes Dominican culture? For example, how does a once despised musical genre – bachata – become a reference point for other expressive forms such as the novel and movies? How is all of this captured in three languages: Spanish, English, and Spanglish? Who gets to be in the story and who is permitted to tell it? The course will be conducted as lecture/discussions. Students will write several essays based on the readings and screenings (which are available streaming). 3 hr. 3 cr. Graduate

The Power of Place: Youth and the City
Monday  5:30 - 7:10 PM
Schaller
Mode: In-person
This seminar will use Lefebvre's concept - "the right to the city" and the "social production of space" - to explore how young people (children and adolescents) experience and shape urban space as they go about their daily lives individually and socialize collectively. Young people, especially adolescents, are often pathologized, ignored, and left out of the design of urban spaces and political life of cities. We will read theoretical literature to define "the right to the city" and discuss how it has been enshrined in legal or normative frameworks in relation to children and youths. We will explore how we might design not just "child-friendly" but youth-friendly cities. Moreover, we will center young people's experiences in urban spaces and examine how they claim the right to the city in variegated ways. Major topics will include, but will not be limited to: street art and graffiti; LGBTQ youth and the right to the city; youth social movements; skateboarding and the production of urban space; youth and participatory research; as well as youth political participation in appropriating and producing urban space. 3 hr.; 3 cr. Through a series of case studies, this interdisciplinary course analyzes the international legal order in the 21st century. It is grounded in the practice of Luis Moreno Ocampo as the founding Chief Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court (ICC). During his tenure (2003–2012), Moreno Ocampo had to make decisions that no prosecutor had made before—where and when to trigger international criminal investigations in sovereign states. As the ICC was getting off the ground, the United States was intervening in Afghanistan and Iraq as part of its global War on Terror. Moreno Ocampo was thus a participant in and a privileged witness of the emergence of two international paradigms to manage violence: the Rome Statute, which created the ICC, and the War on Terror. They both transformed the concept of sovereignty. Students will study the interaction between political, judicial, and military decisions in Afghanistan, Colombia, Darfur, Iraq, Israel/Palestine, Libya, Syria, Uganda, and Venezuela. They will actively engage in debate and simulate decision-maker roles in a number of relevant institutions—the US National Security Council, the UN Security Council, and the ICC. 3 hr. 3 cr. Graduate
BIG BROTHER IS WATCHING US, George Orwell famously wrote in the book 1984. Multiple forms of surveillance capture our lives -- CCTV cameras film the urban space, big data tracks our web visits, and our own cell phones track our locations with GPS. Meanwhile, large national and international projects in policing, biomedicine, and border control prescribe the actions of hundreds of millions of bodies, telling us which bodies should do what and when and how they should do it. All of these surveillance projects, from the algorithms to the borders, are highly raced and gendered -- inequalities are built into the fabric of the systems. It can feel as if we are always being watched, but sometimes, surveillance systems can be useful. Advertisements can algorithmically appear at the moment we need something, seemingly able to read our minds. Some people have been able to find missing biological relatives using DNA databases. And sometimes, the camera can be turned around on those in power, like when a teenager named Darnella Frazier courageously filmed the police murder of George Floyd, sparking protests worldwide for months. Most of us live and avidly participate in cultures of surveillance in our public lives, our work lives, and even in our most personal moments. This course will examine cultures of surveillance from historical, philosophical, and sociological perspectives. It will start by examining classic works in surveillance studies then move to contemporary topics in surveillance including Population (e.g., borders, medicine, reproduction), Crime and Policing (e.g., digital, DNA, body cameras), Security (e.g., military, intelligence), Capitalism (e.g., organizations, advertising), and Digital Spaces (e.g., social media, video games). Students will write a research paper in one of these areas comparing the cultures of surveillance in the United States to that of another country in the Americas. As surveillance continues to calcify into our systems of information, economy, and governance, what are the implications for privacy, identity, and anonymity? What are the implications for human rights, equality, and community? 3 hrs.; 3 cr. Graduate issues, as well as its limitations. Topics will include adult caregiving (or the lack of it); poverty; homelessness; substance abuse; domestic abuse; child labor; children in times of war; and children with special learning challenges (blindness; deafness; autism; emotional disorders, etc.). Even when the subject might seem at first glance gloomy, we'll find much to give us hope because these are, after all, movies about children and the possibilities for the future. Recommended for students with concentrations in Childhood Studies, Disabilities Studies, Social Welfare, Global Labor Studies, and Literary, Media, and Visual Arts. 4 hrs.; 4 crs. (W)(U)
