

Psychology and City College

Irvin Sam Schonfeld
The City College of New York

The April 1988 issue of the American Psychologist (American Psychological Association [APA], 1988) announced the 1987 APA Awards. I could not help but notice that five winners of APA Awards attended City College and one award winner taught chiefly at City College. Morton Deutsch, who won one of the Awards for Distinguished Scientific Contributions, and Robert Glaser, who won the Distinguished Scientific Award for the Applications of Psychology, are City College alumni. Three of the winners of the Awards for Distinguished Professional Contributions were students at City College. Lenore Walker earned her master's degree at City College, although she did her undergraduate work at City's sister institution, Hunter College. Alfred Wellner was a City College alumnus. Hans Strupp attended City College before moving to Washington, DC.

The achievements of our students are a source of pride to past and present faculty. It is equally a source of pride that Kenneth Clark, a Distinguished Professor of Psychology Emeritus of City College and alumnus of Howard University, won the Gold Medal Award for a distinguished career in promoting the public interest. We who are currently students or faculty at City College have an illustrious tradition in psychology to uphold.

REFERENCE

American Psychological Association (1988). American Psychologist, 43(4).