The UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights celebrated its 75th birthday on December 10, 2023. Since that statement of principles following the mass atrocities of WWII, the world has witnessed the spread of human rights discourse, norms, law, and institutions at both the domestic and international levels. Eleanor Roosevelt’s prediction that “a curious grapevine” would spread the ideas articulated in that 1948 General Assembly document seems to have come to fruition. Nevertheless, the aspirations of the Declaration remain far from fulfilled, as grave violations of rights continue to be perpetrated around the globe, often with impunity. Economic inequality, racism, sexism, and multiple refugee crises have engendered and exacerbated the rise of political extremism. Addressing such issues, as well as many others, the Critical Perspectives on Human Rights Conference aims to explore the contested legacy of human rights in increasingly uncertain times. It seeks to foster dialogue and scholarship from a wide range of perspectives. Some conference presenters are scholars and activists who continue to view the human rights project as a moral and ethical challenge to power; others see it as an enabler of political and economic domination. The Critical Perspectives on Human Rights Conference participants seek to reassess the origins, foundations, and contemporary forms of human rights discourse, ideas, and practice today, seventy-five years on.

The Third Critical Perspectives on Human Rights Conference has more than 100 participating scholars and activists with institutional affiliations from nearly two dozen countries, including: Argentina, Bangladesh, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Cuba, Denmark, Ethiopia, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Indonesia, Lebanon, the Netherlands, Nigeria, the Philippines, Portugal, Spain, the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom, and the United States.

The Critical Perspectives on Human Rights Conference is part of a larger initiative at The City College of New York, CUNY, shared between the the President’s Office, the Division of Interdisciplinary Studies, the Colin Powell School for Civic and Global Leadership, and the Division of Humanities and the Arts dedicated to human rights studies, public programming, and scholarship.

AKSYON: Films for Change | AUDITORIUM

15 Short Film Screenings with RESBAK Activists and Filmmakers
The fifteen short films included in this showcase range from "HindiOKes," stop-motion animation, experimental films, documentaries, and a play. Most of these films have been shown in universities, urban poor communities, bars, and street protests. These early works were made using the most spartan means possible in the span of the two years since RESBAK was officially launched in a borrowed garage space of filmmaker friends in Metro Manila. Different from previous screenings, a film created one month before the launching of RESBAK and a recent work created two years ago during the pandemic are now included.

BRUCE CRONIN | AUDITORIUM

Purging the Odious Scourge of Atrocities: The Limits of Consent in International Law
PURGING THE ODIOUS SCOURGE OF ATROCITIES explains the growth of a small body of human rights law that bans the use of violence against a state’s own population when it is deemed a mass atrocity. These laws are binding on all states regardless of whether they have accepted it by signing treaties, or whether it is consistent with widespread state practice. Yet, this challenges the doctrine of consent, which has traditionally been the foundation of international law. Bruce Cronin argues that qualitative changes in the form of global governance are leading to an expansion in the theoretical underpinnings of international law and its role in contemporary world politics. Specifically, in limited and well-defined areas of international law, states have begun to recognize the authority of collective international consensus over individual state consent as the source of some legal rules.

Cronin supports this theory by examining the degree to which the international community has, via multilateral conferences among states, developed a consensus around the legal control of “excessive internal state violence”—that is, a level of coercive force that the international community considers to be disproportionate and illegitimate for pursuing state interests within its own borders. These practices, which the Genocide Convention refers to as an “odious scourge”, include widespread, systematic attacks on civilian populations; violent persecution of defined groups (including genocide, ethnic cleansing, and apartheid); torture; and the violation of civilian immunity in internal armed conflicts. In these cases, state action is subject to general international law that overrides their consent. By allowing us to rethink the mechanisms that give international law actual force, Purging the Odious Scourge of Atrocities promises to reshape our understanding of why states are required to abide by human rights norms they never consented to by treaty or customary practice.

The panel provides an overview of the current political context surrounding the “war on drugs” and will trace RESBAK’s engagement since 2016. The group’s involvement, encompassing roles as artists, community workers, and social workers, will be highlighted within a broader network of mutual aid groups for survivors, as well as its participation in the internationalist organizing of activists. The activists involved will offer distinct perspectives: delving into the artmaking process, they will illustrate how RESBAK creates spaces of sociality through concrete examples such as zines, exhibitions, and performances. Another focus will be on security concerns and the repression faced by cultural-political organizers in the Philippines, placing these challenges within the broader historical context of killings and red-tagging as methods of intimidation. The panel also explores the positionality of artist-organizers and the potential for global solidarity and broader coalitions, particularly in the realms of abolition, harm reduction, and transformative justice.
BEA MARIANO’s community-engaged work started with volunteering for Back to Square 1’s Off-Site/Out of Sight project in 2015, and from 2017 continues with RESpond and Break the Silence Against the Killings (RESBAK). As an artist, she experiments mainly with words, images, sound and video. At present she is trying out — slowly, gently, and out of necessity — automatic and expressionistic approaches to art-making. She also transcribes, translates and codes. She received her BA in Art Studies from the University of the Philippines Diliman. She was a fellow of the Rautenstrauch-Joest Museum’s Leaky Archive project in 2022, engaging with the institution’s Philippine colonial photographs collection. Currently, she is working on dalumat, dalamhati, dignidad, a web-based entity on/of decoloniality.

GLENN PHILIP MARTINEZ AQUINO has lived in the Bay Area for over 20 years but now lives in the Central Valley of California where he was born and raised. He is a grandson and son of Filipino immigrant farmworkers and has worked on several community based projects as a community organizer and as a filmmaker. Aquino holds an MFA in Cinema and is a founder of the film production company, SINE68 Films, that aims to use film as a tool for social change. His films primarily focus on Filipino stories in the US and the Philippines and projects that interrogate the Filipino diaspora. He is currently an active member of RESBAK (RESpond and Break the Silence Against the Killings) an interdisciplinary alliance of artists, media practitioners, and cultural workers advancing social awareness with regards to the killings brought forth by the Duterte administration’s “war on drugs.”

JASMINE GRACE WENZEL is a community organizer who crafts from different angles with texts, as translator, editor and writer of different artistic and journalistic forms. Her research and organizing focuses on the collective liberation from colonial continuities, political aesthetics, and the freedom of movement. She received her training in media and cultural studies at Bauhaus-University Weimar, Goldsmiths University London and her M.A. degree at Humboldt-University Berlin. Her perspective emerges from community research and organizing in translocal and digital learning spaces such as Mapping Philippine Material Cultures at SOAS London, Learning in Island Ecologies (LiIE) at the School of Commons in Zurich, as well as in local feminist and anti-colonial community spaces in Berlin. Recently, she facilitated a workshop on diasporic archives and collage making with Queer Analogue Darkroom at Savvy Contemporary Berlin.

“Resbak! Arts and Resistance to the Drug Killings”

“Resbak: Arts Resistance to the Drug Killings” is an art exhibition focusing on the realities of the drug killings in the Philippines under the Duterte administration. Featuring the work of RESBAK (RESpond and Break the Silence Against the Killings), a global, Philippines-based alliance of artists and cultural workers, the exhibition presents photography, visual art, and multimedia that confront the consequences and aftermath of Duterte’s “war on drugs,” particularly its impact on poor and marginalized communities. This exhibition serves as both a tribute to the victims and a call for justice, encouraging viewers to consider the human cost of political actions.

Rodrigo Duterte was voted to power in 2016 following a foul-mouthed campaign that rode on the promise of eradicating crime. A day after his inauguration, he guaranteed that his term will be “a bloody one.” In his signature wild, irreverent, and dehumanizing rhetoric, Duterte’s first marching order as president was to incite as many people as possible to commit summary executions: “If you know of any addicts, go ahead and kill them yourself.” As dead bodies, mostly from urban slums, began to pile up, it became increasingly clear that this was not a war against drugs as much as it was a war against the poor. The war against drugs is the modern Jim Crow, a legitimization of anti-poor sentiments, a smokescreen for longstanding class-based discrimination, a punitive measure for being poor, and the rationale for this brutal, dehumanizing, and murderous policy against the poor. And there is evidence to show for it. A 2017 study showed that: (1) police targeted the poor disproportionately; (2) many drug-related extrajudicial killings in urban slums directly implicate the police; (3) police officers categorically used paid assassins to carry out the summary executions. Against this backdrop, a group of artists and activists began to meet and work together toward the last quarter of 2016. The immediate objective was to expose and oppose the brutality of what was happening in the Philippines through creative means. With the realization that there was no existing artist collective that specifically registered its opposition to the anti-illegal drug campaign of the government, they decided to organize themselves. They settled on the name “Respond and Break the Silence Against the Killings,” an acrostic that spells out the Filipino street slang "RESBAK" which means to retaliate or get even.

This exhibition and related events are made possible by The City College of New York, the SUNY/CUNY Southeast Asia Consortium, the New York Southeast Asian Network, and Little Manila Queens Bayanihan Art.

ABOUT
THE CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK

Since 1847, THE CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK has provided a high quality and affordable education to generations of New Yorkers in a wide variety of disciplines. CCNY embraces its role at the forefront of social change.

Located in the heart of New York City, CCNY is home to such important “firsts” as: The first college explicitly founded on the ideal of educating the “whole people,” the first documentary film program in the U.S., the first intercollegiate lacrosse game played in the U.S., first student government in the nation, and the longest running Alumni Association in the U.S.

It is ranked #1 by The Chronicle of Higher Education out of 369 selective public colleges in the United States on the overall mobility index. This measure reflects both access and outcomes, representing the likelihood that a student at CCNY can move up two or more income quintiles. In addition, the Center for world University Rankings places CCNY in the top 1.2% of universities worldwide in terms of academic excellence. More than 16,000 students pursue undergraduate and graduate degrees in eight professional schools and divisions, driven by significant funded research, creativity and scholarship. CCNY is as diverse, dynamic and visionary as New York City itself.

Outstanding programs in architecture, engineering, education and the liberal arts and sciences prepare our students for the future, and produce outstanding leaders in every field. Whether they are drawn to the traditional, like philosophy or sociology, or emerging fields like sonic arts or biomedical engineering, our baccalaureate graduates go on to graduate programs at Stanford, Columbia or MIT – or they stay right here in one of our 50 master’s programs or our doctoral programs in engineering, the laboratory sciences, and psychology.
Nowhere else in the city do undergraduates have so many opportunities to conduct research with professors and publish and present their findings. In our science, engineering and social science programs, more than 300 undergrads work alongside senior researchers in funded projects. Leading CUNY in funded research, we house a number of research centers, and soon two new advanced research centers will rise on South Campus. Nearly all of our full-time faculty hold PhDs or – like our architecture faculty – maintain professional practices. Art professors exhibit their work, film professors make films, and music professors perform in venues around the country.

The campus is alive with student activity. City College fields 16 varsity teams that compete in NCAA Division III – and students work out in an equipment rich fitness center and socialize in more than 100 student clubs. And our students come from around the corner and the world, representing more than 150 nationalities. City College is an integral part of the civic, urban and artistic energy of New York and inseparable from its history. We are the City that built this city.

LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We acknowledge that The City College of New York, grounded on the schist bedrock outcrop of Harlem, is situated upon the ancestral homeland and territory of the Munsee Lenape, Wappinger, and Wiechquaesgeck peoples. As members of an educational community, we are obligated to know the histories of dispossession that have allowed The City College of New York to grow and thrive on this vibrant terrain. As designers and thinkers, we endeavor to build in ways that lead toward justice, and we are committed to working to dismantle the ongoing consequences of settler colonialism and to restore the whole people to the full enjoyment of their rights and heritage.

ABOUT CCNY CWE

The CCNY Division of Interdisciplinary Studies at the Center for Worker Education (CCNY CWE) offers a flexible and tailored education designed for working adults and transfer students. This educational approach encourages students to apply their classroom knowledge to real-world situations. The curriculum places a strong emphasis on critical thinking, reading, and writing skills, with a focus on effective communication in various formats, including written, oral, and digital.

Courses at CCNY CWE are delivered through a variety of methods, including Asynchronous, Blended, HyFlex, In-Person, Online, and Synchronous formats. Most courses are 4 credits and are scheduled for evenings, and Saturday mornings and afternoons, to accommodate the needs of working adults.

In addition to its core educational offerings, CCNY CWE sponsors special programs, research initiatives, conferences, and cultural events that align with its interdisciplinary approach to teaching and learning. These include the Patai Lecture Series, the Human Rights Forum, Study Abroad, Quest, The Americas Film Festival of NY, The Americas Poetry Festival of NY, the Rights Talk Podcast, and the CWE/DC37 Partnership Technology Program.

LEARN MORE:
Among the most unique aspects of the Center for Worker Education is its commitment to supporting a diversity of profound, yet topical, educational opportunities. One such example of this commitment is its FRANCES S. PATAI PROGRAM IN HOLOCAUST, GENOCIDE, AND HUMAN RIGHTS STUDIES. The Patai Program at CWE supports courses, conferences, and symposia, as well as public lectures, lectureships, and an annual student essay competition—all dedicated to the lasting and transformative lessons of Holocaust, Genocide, and Human Rights studies.

In addition to being one of the first female graduates of City College, Mrs. Patai was a strong supporter of providing educational opportunities to those people who would otherwise possibly not have access to a formal university education. With this in mind, Mrs. Patai bequeathed a generous donation to CWE that allowed for the creation of a program that now bears her name.

Mrs. Patai was motivated by three aims when she gave her support. First, she wanted to keep alive the memory of those volunteers who joined the Abraham Lincoln Brigade to fight against fascism in the Spanish Civil War. Second, she wanted to make sure students did not forget the terrible events of the Holocaust and believed that an important way to ensure such a tragedy was never repeated was through education, of particularly those who did not necessarily have a personal, cultural, or religious connection to it. In keeping with her desire to educate about the universal implications of such unchecked hatred, Mrs. Patai supported programs that encouraged students to use their knowledge as a springboard for exploring other such events, including both the realities of modern genocide and the ongoing global struggle for human rights.

The mission of the Patai Program is to promote an understanding and acceptance of diversity through explorative education. The Patai Program works to fulfill these aims in various ways: by supporting regular course offerings, by sponsoring a student essay competition, by building up a reference library for students and faculty, and, lastly, by offering community outreach programs, including an annual series of free public lectures and events.
With authoritarianism, nationalism, and xenophobia on the rise, gaping global wealth disparities, and the accelerating climate emergency, human rights appear increasingly fragile. RIGHTS TALK is devoted to engaging contemporary challenges around the world across the human rights spectrum of civil and political rights; economic, social, and cultural rights; and solidarity rights, including to a safe and healthy environment. The podcast invites critical perspectives and questions the future of rights in the twenty-first century.
Our 30-credit program offers students a liberal arts degree, in step with the most cutting-edge trends in interdisciplinary education. For undergraduates in our program, we also offer the possibility to earn both a BA and an MA in the Study of the Americas in less time. The program addresses questions and concepts about the Americas as it focuses on topics such as: race, migration and immigration, popular culture, politics, gender, and human rights. It provides a collaborative space within which students may develop their intellectual engagement, applying diverse and myriad disciplinary approaches to investigate the intersections among education, policy, government, society, history, culture, and the arts.

A rigorous, well-defined curriculum grounds students in an interdisciplinary perspective, while allowing them to explore more individual interests. Our 30-credit program enables students, with approval, to take up to three 3-credit courses as an Independent Study, at another division within the City College, or at another CUNY campus; or even benefit from the Study Abroad programs whose content areas complement those of the MA in the Study of the Americas.

For students who already have careers, we offer a scholarly space in which they may engage their current professional responsibilities and interests using theoretical frameworks. For students who are preparing for a first career or career change, our program offers varying perspectives from which to explore potential paths. Students who have an undergraduate degree in Childhood Education and need to complete an MA for professional certification can use our degree to fulfill that requirement. For additional information, please contact Professor Susanna Rosenbaum, the program director, at srosenbaum@ccny.cuny.edu.
