

In the School of Education, faculty are the leaders in determining and enacting curriculum. Curriculum proposals (e.g., course creation/revision and track creation/revision) begin at the program level, and program faculty seek approval by the department and subsequently by the School of Education Curriculum Committee, chaired by the Deputy Dean. Finally, program faculty seek approval through a full School of Education faculty vote.

Once a proposal has received the appropriate divisional approval, a copy is sent to the Office of the Provost for transmittal to the Board of Trustees. If needed, New York State Education Department forms are also attached.
